

I am tired of being bombarded with offers for Viagra and other "sexual enhancers" in my family email account. What Federal Register is the NPRM for this rule located in? I'm curious as to the definition of "adult content".

These people are getting sneaky. Today I received a spam sales pitch for a "sexual enhancer". It got through my Norton spam filter. I blocked the sender (which I now realize is futile as they simply use another identity). When I clicked on the "remove me" link, I was taken to a site that asked for my email address, for the purpose of removing me. After hitting send the site directed me to another page; this one (a "scare" page) warning me of the dangers of spam and offering to sell me a filter. I've attached the link. So, I'm not sure whether they are selling something to enhance my sex life or if that's simply a ruse to blackmail me into buying a spam filter that will probably not filter out their promos.

Either way, I want it to stop. How do I file a complaint? Can these bottom feeders sell my email address once I opt out of their mailings?

<http://www.mailboxfilter.net/letter/>

Thank you,
B. Audirsch
OR