

The following sample letter is provided to serve as a guideline for creating a compelling heartfelt personal note. Your letter will have a much more meaningful impact if it is written in your own words.

Sarah Atiyeh

July 07, 2006

Dear Sir or Madam:

I am writing this letter because I am concerned about the proposed Business Opportunity Rule R511993. I believe that in its present form, it could prevent me from continuing as a NSE, Distributor. I understand that part of the FTC's responsibilities is to protect the public from "unfair and deceptive acts or practices," yet some of the sections in the proposed rule will make it very difficult, if not impossible, for me to sell NSE products.

I have been a Distributor for less than six months. Originally I became one to have the extra income for a traditional business. As I experience all that there is in building this type of business I noticed that there was a wonderful new opportunity that many of the people with little money can achieve. This is not just for the rich and famous anymore. I have worked so hard to help my family these last months to have what we've always wanted out of life; we can go places, we can buy more than three outfits this season. We can give grandpa something special instead of him always giving to us, we can support our parents as they age and let them have what they'd always dreamed.

One of the most confusing and burdensome sections of the proposed rule is the seven-day waiting period to enroll new Distributors. NSE Distributor sales kit only costs $374 plus tax. People buy TVs, cars, and other items that cost much more and they do not have to wait seven days. This waiting period gives the impression that there might be something wrong with the company or the compensation plan. I also think this seven-day waiting period is unnecessary, because NSE, already has a 90% buyback policy for all products including sales kits purchased by a salesperson within the last twelve months. Under this waiting period requirement, I will need to keep very detailed records when I first speak to someone about NSE as a Distributor and will then need to send in many reports to my company headquarters.

The proposed rule also calls for the release of any information regarding lawsuits involving misrepresentation, or unfair or deceptive practices. It does not matter if the company was found innocent. Today, anyone or any company can be sued for almost anything. It does not make sense to me that I would have to disclose these lawsuits unless NSE is found guilty. Otherwise, NSE and I are put at an unfair advantage even though NSE has done nothing wrong.

[References] Finally, the proposed rule requires the disclosure of a minimum of 10 prior purchasers nearest to the prospective purchaser. I am glad to provide references, but in this day of identity theft, I am very uncomfortable giving out the personal information of individuals (without their approval) to strangers. Also, giving away this information could damage the business relationship of the references who may be involved in other companies or businesses including those of competitors. In order to get the list of the 10 prior purchasers, I will need to send the address of the prospective purchaser to NSE headquarters and then wait for the list. I also think the following sentence required by the proposed rule will prevent many people from wanting to sign up as a salesperson - "If you buy a business opportunity from the seller, your contact information can be disclosed in the future to other buyers." People are very concerned about their privacy and identity theft. They will be reluctant to share their personal information with individuals they may have never met.

I appreciate the work that the FTC does to protect consumers, yet I believe this proposed new rule has many unintended consequences and there are less burdensome alternatives available to achieving your goals.

Thank you for your time in considering my comments.

Respectfully,

Sarah Atiyeh