

Dear Sirs/ Madams,

I am a single mother of one. I have worked very hard to raise my son and become an RN so that I could support the two of us. Unfortunately, I became sick and when I got to middle age, looked around and found that I had no retirement. So I started searching for some thing that would provide me with an ongoing residual income for my aging years. I found Quixtar, or rather it found me. I have been an IBO for about two years. I was presented with all the information I needed upfront. I was told that I shouldn't quit my day job (which I haven't) that I should look at it as a second job until the day when my mentoring up line advised that it was probably safe to depend on my Quixtar income alone. That we would keep building until it was enough to support me through my retirement. So far it is working. It is bringing in a positive income on a regular basis. At any point I could have had a refund of my $125.00 that I paid for my registration fee if I weren't satisfied.

Everyone that I have ever registered into the business has seen the potential and known from the start that it wasn't going to replace their primary income right away, that it was a "two to five year plan" depending on how dedicated they were to making it work. It definitely would have effected the momentum of getting new IBO's off and rolling in their own business's if they had had to wait 7 days to get their feet wet. In fact once most of them understand the concept and they can't wait to get started. The first people they want to show it to are their friends and loved ones. The registration fee is only $125.00 (at most) and if someone chooses they want a refund, all I have to do is give them their money back and then contact the company for my refund. Fortunately, I have never had to do that yet.

Every IBO receives a Business Reference Guide when they register with the Corp. This includes Rules of Conduct, Regulations and Tips on Business Management. And these are adhered to very strictly and enforced by our up line. We are very proud of Quixtar and the people that are attracted to it.

As far as disclosure of litigation against Quixtar this is ridiculas. Does Sears or Wal-Mart hand you a list of litigation they are or have been involved in, guilty or not when you walk in their door? Of course not! There may have one available if you request it, but they certainly don't offer it upfront. It would be suicide for their business.

When I prospect clients for my business I happily take them to Regional Meetings or to an up line Home Meeting within a couple of weeks of their hearing the plan from me. This allows them to meet and talk with others that are making their business work. It allows them to also meet others who are just getting started in the business. They can get valuable advice from people who have a stake in their business success and not from someone who is competing with them or even wants to recruit them away from me. If I were to provide them with 10 names of others then they may decide they want to be recruited by someone else and this would create dissention among otherwise complacent IBO's.

As an up line I have no problem sharing my bonus check stubs with my down line from time to time but I really feel that the full extent of my income is no ones business but my own (and perhaps the FTC's) I don't want to have to disclose my full income to anyone, it is private. I do share my income from Quixtar because it is inspirational to them, Gosh! It is inspirational to me that I can earn an extra income this way! I thank God every day that I found Quixtar and that it is going to provide me with the retirement I need. Please don't tie our hands with unnecessary regulations when most of us already do everything we can to keep this business legitimate and honest.
