

Federal Trade Commission

July 13, 2006

To Whom It May Concern:

My wife and I have been Ibo's for four years and counting. We have an ELC Business. In the next two months, we will be Silver Producers and onward to Freedom. Our family has benefited from our association in this Business. I have left one of my jobs and our children are surrounded by fabulous mentors who have Blessed their lives.

When we looked at this project, a packet of information was given to us to look so we could make an intelligent decision. We provide similar and updated material to our prospects as well. This project takes work and we use the term delayed gratification and not a get quick scheme. There are no guarantees in this project and that is stated up front. There is a duplication system in place that spells out success. New Business owners start for $125 which is all refundable if they decide this project is not for them. There questions are answered at a start up for their Business and we also have weekly meetings meant for them to meet people on our team and get more information.

The idea of a seven day waiting period to get started makes no sense. When you can help a new person build their team fast why discourage them by waiting seven days. Many people take extra time to gather information. Why penalize a person who wants to grow their Business fast. Fast is fun slow is painful and discouraging. We want to help others not frustrate them.

Personal information is just that private. We provide people with what has been calculated by Quixtar as the average monthly gross income. Why would we want to provide names to our prospect to other Ibo's. That is sabotaging your efforts and somebody else may register them in their Business.

It is inappropriate to list all litigation involving cases against any company since many of those cases would have no merit for any action. This as well as what we are making is inappropriate and we can not gage that as we are making money still from people who joined us long ago.

Finally, this Business will provide wealth(time and money) for our family and our children's children. That excites us everyday that a company like Quixtar is helping my family achieve whatever they desire. Thanks for listening.

Kerry and Tina Keehl