I would like to start with a little information about my experience as an Independent Business Owner in the Quixtar business model provided by the Alticor Corporation.

My wife and I are business partners at the age of 60. We have been in the business model of Quixtar since it began in 1999. We have reached the goal of 1500 PV, leaders club and have business in another country. My education is in electrical engineering. In the Missouri job market at this time it is very hard to be an engineer and be able to provide for my family. I need a business activity which would allow me to have ownership for the work I did.

As you can expect as an engineer I spent many hours investigating the Quixtar opportunity. NO other business opportunity gave me the opportunity the Alticor Corporation provides. When I became an IBO I was given all the information needed to make an informed decision, but as an engineer I chose to do further investigate and found the information provided was completely true. My wife and I are in the Quixtar business because of the decisions we made.

For those IBO that I bring into the business, I share with them my experience of investigation and try to help them succeed in there business quicker. My team mates understand this is not a get rich quick plan and requires work. I know there are not any guarantees of success. Let me make some comments on specific issues in the FTC proposal:

1. The requirement of a seven-day waiting period.

I will be honest with you people in today world want things NOW. We have a money back guarantee way over the seven day period, which allow the prospective IBOs to get their money back in full. I don't see any advantage in having a seven day waiting period if you have a full money back guarantee.

2. The requirement to provide references:

To provide a list of local reference could be impossible in some location where you are trying to start a new IBO. Because this is the first time this business model is being shown to people in that location. We have business conferences where other IBOs can meet other team members in the business. Also by giving a list of references locally would give a disadvantage to a new IBO who doesn't have any one to reference locally. NOT a GOOD Idea.

3. The requirement to provide a "litigation list":

This to me is like shooting your self in the foot. Anyone can in our court system make an acquisition against a company. Every major corporation has litigations against them; information on these litigations is available on the Internet. Don't make my business bad because of here say!

4. The requirement for specific earnings disclosures:

The business disclosure gives average active IBO income level presently. If a new IBO disclosed his or her income it would be very small. If you were joining a business team with the leader making very little money would you join his or her team, NO. So we would be looking only at established business leaders. Which would mean it would be very hard to start a business.

5. The requirement for financial substantiation:

First of all my business income is private. Every corporation doesn't allow employees to share their pay check amounts with each other. Other IBO have an idea how much I make by the award level I have achieved in the business.

Thank you for your time reviewing my comments.

Sincerely,

Ron & Nancy Lares
