My wife and I are very excited to be an Independent Business Owner powered by Quixtar. Our journey with Quixtar has been exiting, productive and we are looking absolutely confident to attain financial freedom through this opportunity. Quixtar is a very honest, trustworthy, and ever growing dynamic company and we do not have single regret whatsoever to be associated with Quixtar.

Points to note:

1. When we got registered, we had been provided all facts and figures that helped us to make a well-informed decision to become an IBO with Quixtar.
2. When we sponsor someone, we make sure that the prospect is provided all information that helps them make a well informed decision
3. We make sure that the prospect understands that this is not a quick rich scheme and they are willing to work to succeed in this business
4. The proposed seven day rule to wait before the prospect can get started in the business after seeing it is not be encouraged because this affects our individual businesses. I personally believe that the IBO's with Quixtar contribute positively to the economy of the United States of America by empowering people to start their own business. Applying the seven-day rule will slow down the progress of the IBO, which in turn lowers the contribution that the IBO can make towards the economy. Quixtar already is disclosing more than sufficient information and appropriate cancellation policy for prospects, which is just and fair. Implementing any tighter rules or standards is not fair.
5. Giving a list of 10 references is not at all needed because in our case the prospect is usually exposed to the bigger team that we work with. I believe that the team adds credibility and helps prospect make a well-informed decision that this is the right opportunity.
6. Giving a list of 10 references is not to be encouraged because this will rise to conflicts and invade privacy of people. I will personally not prefer my information to be disclosed by my associates to unknown people. This gives rise to all sorts of confusion
7. Providing personal financial information with prospects is not be encouraged. Quixtar already has SA4400 that is useful to prospects because they can get to know the average income of IBOs with Quixtar
8. In this opportunity, everybody who chooses to succeed can become successful so providing personal income information is not a logical information to prospects in order for them to make a decision to pursue this opportunity
