To whom it may concern:

I believe that the proposed Business Opportunity Rule S11993 is unfair to the honest home business owner.

First, why the 7 day waiting period? I sell health products. This could cause my future customers unnecessary suffering because they have to wait 7 days. The customer has the option of investigating as long as they want before making a purchase. This should not be regulated. Plus, my company has a 90% buy back policy.

Second, if any information regarding lawsuits is required, it should also be mandatory to give the outcome of the law suit. People can sue for anything, and the law suit may be unjustified. A competitor could sue his competition just to make them look bad.

Third, references. I don't want my information being passed around to strangers, and most people I know feel the same way. That is an invasion of privacy.

This seems more like an attempt by major companies to eliminate competition. I hope you do not let that happen. I understand that the FTC is trying to protect consumers. But, they already have a complaint department. Why not crack down on abusers rather than making blanket rules that punish everyone?

Thanks for considering my comments.
