I'm curious as to why this particular topic would even need discussion. As far as I'm concerned, adware, spyware and spam are no different than the telemarketers. If I want them keepin' track of what I'm doin' I'll let them know. If I wish to purchase their products I'll go to the store and buy it. If I wanted all their crap mail I'd ask for it. I am on the no call list and I'd appreciate something like that to go into effect for this stuff too. The one thing that really ticks me off is that what they send to my computer not only annoys me, but makes adjustments to my registry values and sends info (my personal info) to people I've never heard of so they can send me more crap. I paid good american, hard earned money for this computer and unless they plan on buyin' me a new one I'd suggest they quit messin' with the one I have.
