I have three computers that I use for personal use and business. At the time of purchase these units came to about $5000. Not much to those who consistantly barrage my system with unwanted garbage. In my case I have had to replace the hard drive and mother board in one and the hard drives in both of the other units due to spy and adware that was either unintentionally loaded or loaded itself. The third machine was at the manufacturer's repair facility for over a two months while waiting for a specific hard drive and another one of those systems is down again and again it was due to a search engine program that loaded itself due to a spyware program according to the microsoft help desk.

How about a Do Not E-mail list my computer IP.
